Rep. Miller-Meeks: Renewing the American Dream

On Tuesday night, I had the honor of personally greeting President Trump and attending his Joint Address to Congress alongside my guest, Riley Gaines. After four disastrous years under Joe Biden and Kamala Harris, President Trump's speech was a much-needed reminder that strong leadership is back, and the American Dream is being restored.

Iowans know what it means to work hard, raise families, and build businesses—yet under the Biden Administration, these values were put under attack. We saw out-of-control inflation, skyrocketing interest rates, an open border allowing drugs and crime into our communities, and foreign policy failures that emboldened our adversaries. But Tuesday night, President Trump laid out a bold vision to turn things around and put America First once again.

One of the key takeaways from his address was his unwavering commitment to securing our borders. We all know the damage that Biden's open-border policies have done—fentanyl pouring into our communities, criminals exploiting weak enforcement, and hardworking Americans paying the price. President Trump made it clear: his administration will finish the wall, reinstate Remain in Mexico, and enforce the law to keep Americans safe.

Another critical focus was the economy. Iowans are feeling the pinch of Bidenflation every time they buy groceries, fill up their gas tanks, or pay their mortgage. But under President Trump's leadership, manufacturing is returning, interest rates are coming down, and businesses—both large and small—are gaining confidence again. We saw it before, and we will see it again: when we cut taxes, eliminate burdensome regulations, and empower workers, America thrives.

President Trump also reaffirmed his support for protecting women's sports, something I've been fighting for in Congress. He knows that allowing biological men to compete against women is not just unfair—it's dangerous. I will continue standing alongside leaders like Riley Gaines to ensure that our daughters and granddaughters have a level playing field.

Our Commander-in-Chief showed that America is once again strong on the world stage. After years of Biden's weakness emboldening our enemies, President Trump is focused on restoring peace through strength. He outlined his plan to end the war in Ukraine, bring hostages home from Gaza, and hold the Chinese Communist Party accountable. America cannot afford to be weak—we must lead with confidence.

I left the Joint Address feeling optimistic and energized for the future. President Trump is fighting to get our country back on track, and I will continue working alongside him to deliver real results for Iowans. The American Dream is not lost—it's being renewed. Let's get to work.
